Kennedy's Position Impregnable

Civil Rights Battle Faced Plane Over By Democratic Convention

Democratic National Convention squared off today for a civil rights battle, with Sen. John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts holding an impregnable position as its potential presidential nominee.

Adherents of Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas refused to give up hope that he can wrest the nomination away from Kennedy by a dramatic last-

In line with this, Johnson called a news conference today for what an aide called "an important announcement concerning the issues involved in the convention" and Johnson's position concerning

The aide declined to elaborate. Asked whether Johnson would announce then that he was withdrawing from the race, the aide replied "No, definitely not."

But if Johnson wouldn't give up, only a relative few among the delegates questioned that Kennedy will go beyond the required 761 votes for the top nomination on the first presidential tally Wednes-

This situation spawned feverish activity on the part of Democrats of all shades of opinion hoping to get in on the ground floor of what they hope will become the first party administration of the White House in eight years.

The Cuban Battleline Is Drawn

President Eisenhower's answer to Nikita Khrushchev's rocket-rattling has drawn the battle line for the showdown between the Western Hemisphere and international communism over Cuba.

The Kremlin chieftain issued the challenge when he attempted to steal our Monroe Doctrine thunder by declaring he would protect Cuba from United States intervention. Such a challenge could not be ignored by the United States because it represents an effort to achieve just exactly what the Monroe Doctrine was designed to prevent-interference in the affairs of this hemisphere by nations from any other hemisphere.

IN MEETING the challenge, the President made two things clear

1. The United States is willing to live and let live as far as Cuba is concerned. This is why the United States has borne in silent suffering the offensive propaganda Fidel Castro has been spewing forth for months. This is why when Castro started confiscating American assets in Cuba, the United States chose to withdraw its sugar subsidy to the island rather than take some action more physically aggressive.

In short, our policy so far has been based on the philosophy of live and let live. Castro needs us more than we need him, but if he thinks otherwise he is free to go his own way and take his consequences.

2. The Monroe Doctrine is no longer a unilateral policy of the United States. It has been adoptd as hemispheric policy by the other nations of Latin America. Three specific agreements and the Organization of American States back it up as such.

Therefore, one of the consequences Fidel Castro should beware of in advance is that If and when his own way endangers the way other nations in the New World want to go, he can expect trouble.

If the way Castro chooses to go is the route of international communism, there is precedent aplenty for assuming that other nations of the hemisphere would consider It a danger to their own well-being.

And if Nikita Khrushchev works too hard at turning the Castro regime onto the road of international communism, he will have more than the United States to deal with. Thos are the two points President Eisenhower's answer to Nikita Khrushchev was intended to clear up, but there is more to the statement than that. As policy, it must be carried out. As a battle line, it must be backed up.

IN THE FIRST PLACE, the United States must have the patience to wait until that hemispheric concept of the Monroe Doctrine comes into play in the Cuban situation. Other Latin American capitals have been reluctant to jump into the fray, although their sympathies have been hinted at in a variety

They are waiting for events in Cuba to develop to the point where thee will be on really firm ground in making a move against Castro. It will be wise for the United States to wait with them.

In the second place, when the time comes to make a move, the United States must be prepared to make it. That may be brinksmanship, but it is the only course that will discourage the Communists in the final analysis. To back down from a firm stand would be worse than not taking a firm stand in the first place. It would convince not only the Communists but our friends throughout the world that we lack the fortitude to fight for what we see as right.

NO ONE ARGUES firm action will be easy. Tough times are ahead and we have probably seen only the beginning-suggestions that Cuba will demand our forfeiture of the Guantanamo Naval Base pose more serious problems than we have had to face with Castro up to now.

But if the United States in 1823-weak and young and brash and inxperienced-could make the Monroe Doctrine stick, there is no reason we cannot make it stick today. If we do not, we will simply be handing the Communists proof of their contention that in growing big and wealthy we have also

Bongo-Bongo In The Congo

Most of the grim predictions about trouble when Belgian discipline was lifted from the republic created out of its holdings in the African Congo probably will come true.

Some of them came true last week. Congolese troops revolted against their Belgian officers, who had stayed on hand to guide the Africanization of the republic's army. The troops then did a fair job of running amuck and committing atrocities against whites. Terror replaced discipline.

But so much is at stake in the efforts of Africans to achieve self-governing status and competence in these middle years of the 20th century that Americans will do well to withhold judgment, especially bitter judgment.

It will help if Americans remember that troops ran amuck in times past in places whose prospects of order in the first days of freedom were brighter than they could be in the case of Africans.

There was terror in France when the republic began.

It was not good to be a Tory in the American colonies when the taste of freedom had gone to the heads of extremists.

Englishmen cannot forget that atrocities were committed in their bloody struggle for the right to have a hand in their own affairs. Freedom cannot be handed to any society, sealed, sanitized and safe. The sel-discipline that freedom requires cannot be imposed. It can come only from the inside, when a majority finally will not tolerate the misbehavior of minorities.

And as to terror generated by the hatred of some Congolese for some of the white Europeans who symbolize the colonialism that is disappearing from Africa, Americans can think with shame of race riots in their cities and the fact every city police force must fear the possibility of some new outbreak of this kind

When statements about the evidence of failure in the new republic are heard, they should be balanced with reminders of the evidence of failure in other new republics. The fate of self-government in Africa is being decided by these first experiments in native rule. Too much is at stake for offhand judgments that might undermine confidence in what is being attempted.

Mobility, But Not Movement

Although it may have been merely a byproduct of the turbulent atmosphere of a political convention, Mike DiSalle's statement that he would not want to commit himself to serving out his term as governor will cause a lot of eyebrow-raising in Ohio. We are willing to accept at face value his explanation that he likes to keep himself mobile. As anybody remotely familiar with politics knows, that is a wise policy for a politician who has his sights set on bigger

But we are also forced to assume that when Mr. DiSalle ran for the first four-year gubernatorial term, it constituted prima facie evidence that he planned to serve the people of Ohio for that length of time. We must take that at face value, too.

The governor has suggested many times since he took his present office that he might not run for re-election in 1962. It is no secret that he has a fondness for the hurly-burly of Washington life, which he sampled in the most trying of circumstances.

The speculation about his future plans has been heightened by his all-out efforts on behalf of the presidential candidacy of Sen. John F. Kennedy, although his motive in that appeared to be as much state party unity as personal ambition

Despite these factors in his future, he nevertheless holds a mandate from the people of Ohio to fulfill the responsibility which he asked for and got right here in Ohio. Until 1963, that mandate should be paramount in his thoughts.

He has embarked upon an ambitious state administrative program, many parts of which could be assets for Ohio if carried through. He has created his share of controversies which he should have a hand in settling, one way or another. He has, by implication, taken on himself the responsibility of showing Ohioans that hey did the right thing in lengthening the governor's term from two years to four years.

To pull himself out of the Ohio picture before his term has run its course would be a disservice to the people who elected him and to the party members who have committed themselves so deeply to his programs, political and governmental.

This is not to day, of course, that Mr. Di-Salle should avoid paving the way for new heights in the future. Many a man before him has used the governor's office as a stepping-stone. In proper stride, it is a smart way to build a political career. But the best political careers are built on dedicated performance at each step along the way.

If the governor wants to keep himself in a position of mobility, that is understandable. But he should not move until after January

The Once Over

Health is playing such a big part in presidential conventions, that the right glands rather than the right man in the White House may be a big issue. The Democratic convention takes on an aspect of a health institute, with all candidates opening press interview with "I never felt better in YOUR life."

There are candidates who are not sure if they are expected to show up as candidates or for their medical.'

The feeling is high that a man may lose votes through a tired look, a tendncy to sit down when talking or a rumor he was seen taking a pill behind a door.

The Democrats started it but the GOP may have to emphasize the "vigor, vim, perfect trim" aspect. Nixon will have an advantageous spot, since he is the only candidate and his "physical" will be exclusive.

Up to now a candidate was under no handicap if known to have a medicine cabinet in the house. But his association with a capsule or tonic can now be damaging.

"How's your health?" is 1960 convention greeting. The proper answer is, "If I felt any finer I would quit the White House contest and enter the Olympics."

We just heard one candidate asked a delegate, "Are you for me?" and get reply, "I don't know. Let me see your tongue."

Possible campaign slogans: "Vote for Whoziss; He's strong as an ox." "Nominate a man who is not only the people's, but the doctors' choice." "Put a man in the White House who has never had a head cold." "America needs a man who can chin himself 20 times

Red Chinese Work On Castro

By Victor Riesel

From the underground in Havana, via the anti-Fidelista Cuban exiles in New York, comes word that Castro is working more close-

He now heads for Havana as Soviet ambassador in charge of outmaneuvering the Chinese Communists and not as a master spy.

BUT IT IS LATER than Comrade Sergei thinks. The Chinese already have had the Cuban army inspector general in Peiping for a month.

Not long after, there arrived in the Chinese Communist capital one Jose Maria de la Aguilera, propaganda secretary of the Cuban Confederation of Labor

He comes out of the bank workers union. The Chinese comrades romanced him. They listened to his speeches. They put him on the

By Truman Twill

I earned a reputation years back thrasher and another bird that as, a foe of birds, which I kept might have been a goldfinch. attacking in print as if they and were fellow politicians.

Bird lovers looked at me through veiled eyes. A national organization of these mystics, the Audubon Society, heard about my rancor and carried me on its mailing list for years as "Right on the Beak" Twill. That had been the heading on a column I wrote once, smashing birds with sharp rights and Castro's people - from the mili- lefts from my typewriter.

Then I went soft. Chickened. We moved to the country and went so nature happy I forgot to dislike people's featheree friends. There were so many birds flapping around the countryside it was hard to stay mad at them because they neutralized one another with their antics.

For years I have seen a red wing blackbird every summer morning on the same perch atop a fence overlooking his nest. Though I don't actually say, "Good morning," his presence is reassuring. That much is right with the world.

Nothing I know about is more cheerful than a cathird practicing imitations of all the other birds in the morning. He's as hard to resist as a whistling boy on his way to a fishing hole.

In the dead of winter when things are bleak, a crimson cardinal and his tailored mate sitting together on a branch can restore more faith in the probability that things will come out all right than a pep talk by the boss and a $5 raise.

Members of the family who never had like to dislike birds - who ignored them altogether-began to turn bird-brained in the country. One, who never had identified a bird in her life, except the one that flies on a two-bit piece, was flapping her wings one night because she had identified a brown above the beak. Poww!

cal paradox of the century. Sen. Kennedy has the votes to win the nomination but a majority of the delegates themselves, if they had not been irrevocably committed in advance to the Massachusetts sen- nedy ator, would vote this week for Sen.

Lyndon Johnson. For the Texas senator is the real choice of the delegates. There's no doubt about it. Every conversation with key men in various delegations confirms that appraisal.

The feeling is that Johnson could surely win in November and that Kennedy is likely to be beaten by Nixon. The contrast is between a youthful candidate and an experienced leader.

Then why doesn't the convention nominate the man of its choice? That's a good question, and to answer it one must be familiar with the arts of preconvention strategy and the influence of organization politics at the local level.

Again and again, as one talks to delegates of the independent type, they bemoan the fact that deals and trades inside the states have brought Sen. Kennedy his delegate strength. They tell of the early efforts of pro-Kennedy men extending back for four years.

IT TAKES TIME and money to line up a first or second-ballot victory such as Sen. Kennedy has in sight.

Some estimates are that five million dollars has been spent in the Kennedy movement. This means that commitments were made months ago.

It shouldn't be inferred that votes were actually bought, but in politics the ambitious are ready to give their support for what they can get out of it later, either through appointments to office or other favors in federal, state or city governments

The Kennedy strength is incalculably greater than his opponnts ever believed. When any candidate gets within hailing distance of a nomination, only a miracle can prevent his winning it. The "stop Kennedy" plots have been numerous, but one by one they are proving illusory. For the fact is that the Massachusetts senator has solid commitments. His lieutenants have done their

In many of these states the minority are outspoken in favor of Nothwithstanding the Kennedy strength, it is amazing how the ground swell for Lyndon Johnson has grown in recent weeks. But while a ground swell may be a reflection of how the voters in a given state feel, this does not sway the delegates. They are not responsive to public sentiment. They are responsive only to the leaders and the organizations that brought them here and, in many instances, paid their travel and hotel al product of ideological unity. Because as the sleeping car porter put it,' "A platform is something to get in on, not something to stand on.'

The convention provides for party leaders a "human situation" for the elaborate give-and-take required to keep the party together.

It is through this give-and-take at a convention that such polesapart Democrats as Gov. G. Mennon Williams of Michigan and Sen. Harry F. Byrd of Virginia can remain in the same party and ultimately support the same candi-

TO FOREIGN OBSERVERS accustomed to the strict party discipline of a parliamentary system. the big convention show looks like a confused combination of pathological rhetoric on the rostrum and witless gyrations in the delegates stands, a sad way to run a great country

And there is, as James A. Farley put it, "a carnival spirit, a touch of the sawdust and the sideshow about a national convention that makes it unique among public gatherings.

Open sessions of conventions are almost always educational and ratfication meetings. They give the rank-and-file party workers a sense of common purpose in participating physically and emotionally in the nominating convention. But the big questions either have been decided before the temporary chairman bangs the opening gavel or are "compromised out" behind the scenes.

As a recent study of Brookings Institution points out, the situation at the opening of the convention is similar to that of "and end-game in chess-the positions and relative strength of the antagonists are the result of the game that went on before.

crats required a two-thirds vote to nominate at a convention. The Brookings study shows that in 14 of the 26 conventions during the period, the successful candidate

came to the convention with more than 50 per cent of the delegate Since 1932, when majority rule was adopted, every successful candidate has come into the convention with more than 66 per cent of the vote on the first ballot except in 1952. 2. One potential candidate is in a powerful position but weaker candidates have hopes that an upset can be pulled, either by brilliant operations or by blunders by the front-runner.

This was the situation at the 1956 Democratic convention, when Adlai Stevenson had a clear lead but New York Gov. Averell Harriman, with President Truman's backing, still hoped for a miracle. This is the situation in Los Angeles, with Sen. John Kennedy of Massachusetts far in the lead, and the other contenders trying to work out a combination of powers to stop him. 3. A fluid situation-with no candidate near the victory level. This requires enough strong candidates with enough votes to form combinations and deals. It happened at the 1952 Democratic convention. On the first ballot, Sen. Estes Kefauver of Tennessee had 240 votes; Stevenson, 273; Sen. Richard Russell, 268; Harriman, 1231/2; Sen. Robert Kerr of Oklahoma, 50 and nine other favorite-son candidates had smaller bunches.

The game was over when Harriman and some favorite sons tossed their votes to Stevenson on the third ballot. In such a situation, even before television cameras, a convention cannot acquire the orderly and deliberative atmosphere of Rome's College of Cardinals.
